2019 ANNUAL REPORT

BREAD FOR THE WORLD
BREAD FOR THE WORLD INSTITUTE

Message from the Chairs of the Board of Directors

We are delighted to present this report of Bread for the World and Bread for the World Institute's achievements in 2019. It is a testament to the collaborative work and generosity of tens of thousands of Bread for the World members invested in ending hunger.

Among this year's important achievements is the board of directors' thoughtful guidance of Bread's presidential transition.

For nearly three decades, Bread for the World's president Rev. David Beckmann has been a visionary and principled leader. During his tenure, Bread has grown in membership and effectiveness, consistently contributing to important reductions in hunger in the United States and around the world. As David retires, we give thanks for his integrity, commitment, wisdom, and faithful voice for the Gospel. He will continue to be a passionate voice for ending hunger.

John Carr

In March 2020, after an intensive search, the board of directors elected Rev. Eugene Cho to be Bread's third president. Eugene brings a pastor's heart, brilliant mind, and compelling voice. As he leads Bread into the future, he will build on our strengths and powerfully connect faith and action to help end hunger.

Our nation and world face enormous and unexpected challenges. With a clear mission to end hunger and advocate across lines of party and ideology, Bread for the World's work to change the policies and programs that allow hunger to persist is more important than ever. Thank you for being a vital part of this lifegiving mission.

As David Beckmann retires as president of Bread for the World, I offer my congratulations and commendation. Under his leadership, Bread for the World has been a valuable ministry in partnership with the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America and with ELCA's work of advocacy in Washington, D.C. As a pastor of the ELCA, David has been an inspiring advocate for ending hunger and poverty in God's world.

Three Decades of Visionary Leadership

In 1991, Rev. David Beckmann became the second president of Bread for the World. He succeeded Rev. Arthur Simon, who founded Bread in 1974. With his leadership, Bread members have helped expand and shape international development programs and protect our nation's safety net programs.

1991-1999. Bread helped win increases and bipartisan support for the WIC program (nutrition assistance for Women, Infants, and Children). Welfare reform in 1996 included deep cuts to the food stamp program (now called SNAP), but Bread worked with others to restore SNAP food assistance.

Toward the end of the decade, Bread helped convince Congress to increase support for smallholder farmers in Africa. It also established a fund to speed up

Message from the President

At the end of June 2020, I will retire as president of Bread for the World and Bread for the World Institute. I want to express my deep gratitude to Bread's wonderful network of committed individuals, churches, and partner organizations. Your persistence and effectiveness inspire the larger movement to end hunger and poverty in our world.

I am grateful for the opportunity to have led Bread for the World for nearly 30 years. Together, we have had a significant impact on U.S. public policies that are important to people struggling with hunger. We have contributed to the world's surprising progress against hunger, poverty, and disease during this period. God has been present among us and has used us.

We are blessed to welcome Rev. Eugene Cho as the new president of Bread for the World and Bread for the World Institute. Eugene is deeply grounded in God and Jesus and well equipped to lead Bread for the World over the coming years. I'm confident that Eugene will provide the dynamic leadership Bread needs now.

Our country and the world are now reeling from the impact of COVID-19 and its economic fallout. Our work is needed now more than ever.

In this time of crisis, we continue to draw strength from our loving God. Christian faith recognizes the power of evil and death in the world. Jesus Christ suffered and died for the sins of the world. Yet God raised Jesus from the dead, lives within us, and promises a joyous conclusion to the human story.

Thank you for your faithful support. Through Bread for the World, you will help our U.S. government provide the leadership that our country and the world so desperately need.

David Beckmann's determined leadership has inspired many of us in the Episcopal Church as we seek God's vision of a world without hunger. It has been an honor to serve with David in the Circle of Protection and with other church leaders who are lifting their voices on behalf of those whose voices are often ignored. I give thanks that, in retirement, David will continue to be an active part of the Jesus Movement.

In the Jubilee campaign to relieve the debts of low-income countries, Bread led the U.S. legislative coalition. With help from Bono, the campaign won U.S. government support for debt relief. Debt relief reduced the obligations of 36 countries by 90 percent, resulting in increased access to health care and public education (especially for girls).

2000-2009. Bread helped to more than double funding for national nutrition programs. Bread also supported higher nutrition standards for school meals.

In 2001, Beckmann founded the Alliance to End Hunger to engage diverse religious groups, charities, foundations, corporations, unions, and individuals in building the public and political will to end hunger. The Alliance and Bread work together.

During these years, political leaders from the two parties worked together with support from Bread and its Bread for the World has been blessed with David Beckmann's leadership for three decades. During that time, our nation and the world have made tremendous progress in achieving God's vision of a world without hunger. David's lifelong dedication to ending extreme hunger reflects both his deep faith in Jesus and his commitment to Catholic social teaching.

Bread for the World and Bread for the World Institute continued to focus on our goal of ending hunger through policy change amid challenging U.S. politics. Our history of working on key anti-hunger issues in a bipartisan way and from a position of faith contributed to Bread's credibility and influence.

Global Nutrition

Bread for the World's 2019 Offering of Letters: Better Nutrition, Better Tomorrow campaign achieved broad, bipartisan support for stronger U.S. investments to overcome maternal and child malnutrition.

Bread for the World drafted two Global Nutrition resolutions (H.Res.189 and S.Res.260), which were introduced in the House and Senate in March and June of 2019 respectively. The resolutions recognize the importance of continued U.S. leadership in improving maternal and child nutrition. Bread members and partners recruited a total of 185 members of Congress from both parties as cosponsors of the House and Senate resolutions.

Each resolution passed out of their respective committees with broad, bipartisan support. At the end of 2019, the House resolution passed the Foreign Affairs Committee and is poised for approval by the full House. The Senate resolution was approved unanimously by the full Senate in January 2020.

Bread for the World members also helped persuade Congress to increase funding for global nutrition for the second consecutive year — increasing the amount to $150 million. Congress allocated an additional $5 million that will allow 50,000 more children suffering from severe malnutrition and 200,000 women with anemia to receive treatment. In addition, Congress increased poverty-focused international assistance overall by $1.3 billion, or 4 percent, in contrast to the president's proposal for deep cuts to international aid.

Bread for the World Institute worked with the U.S. Agency for International Development to set nutrition priorities for its programs of investment in agriculture, health, and humanitarian assistance.

Domestic and International Poverty-Focused Programs

In 2019, Bread for the World members and partners played a role in seeing that the fiscal year 2020 appropriations agreement included a substantial increase for domestic safety-net programs — the first increase since 2010. The biggest increases went to low-income housing and education for low-income children. Child nutrition programs were funded at $474 million, providing meals for an estimated 31 million children. For the first time, the advocacy partners to triple funding and improve the quality of poverty-focused international assistance. This increased funding contributed to unprecedented progress against hunger and poverty around the world.

President Bush proposed the Millennium Challenge Corporation, which aids low-income countries that practice good government. Bread provided leadership in winning bipartisan support. Bread also helped pass the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act to promote Africa-U.S. trade.

The end of 2008 brought a world food crisis as well as an international financial crisis. Bread supported President Obama's leadership of international investment in smallholder farmers in low-income countries and helped convince the administration to include nutrition in their initiative.

WIC Breastfeeding Program received enough funding to staff peer counselors in every WIC agency across the country.

The budget agreement also mandates that poverty-focused aid to Central America and food security aid worldwide must be disbursed — and not rescinded by the administration.

Criminal Justice Reform

Bread for the World believes that reforming our nation's criminal justice system is critical to ending hunger and poverty in the United States. In 2019, Bread continued its work on the First Step Act, which passed in the House and Senate with strong bipartisan margins in December 2018. The First Step Act reduces mandatory minimum sentences for nonviolent drug offenders and gives judges more flexibility in sentencing. The legislation provides for education, training, and treatment programs to help people successfully re-enter society.

Bread for the World met with Department of Justice officials and congressional leadership to urge robust funding and equitable implementation of the bill. The fiscal year 2020 budget agreement fully funds the First Step Act and provides increased funding for Second Chance re-entry grants. These grants will help organizations continue to provide education and employment training programs for individuals who were formerly incarcerated.

poverty-focused programs. Beckmann co-founded the Circle of Protection, a group of religious leaders from a broad array of faith traditions, who have worked together to urge Congress to support poverty-focused programs. Despite repeated budget brinkmanship, no substantial cuts to low-income programs have taken place.

Thanks to a bipartisan coalition of members of Congress, along with the advocacy of Bread and its partners, international aid continued to increase throughout this decade. Bread pushed successfully for reform of food aid so that more food can be purchased locally, making that aid more timely and cost-effective.

Progress against world hunger inspired Bread to focus on the feasibility of ending hunger by 2030. In 2015, during Pope Francis' visit to the United States, our government joined other nations in adopting the Sustainable Development Goals, calling for an end to extreme poverty and hunger by

2019 Advocacy Summit

More than 300 people participated in a two-day Advocacy Summit and Lobby Day on June 10-11. In 176 meetings, participants urged their members of Congress to co-sponsor the global nutrition resolutions and increase funding for global nutrition.

The event included a convening of 84 Pan-African/African American and 44 Latino leaders to learn from each other and raise their distinct voices against hunger and poverty. A reception and book launch for Rev. Arthur Simon, Bread for the World's founder and president emeritus, was held to celebrate the release of his latest book, Silence Can Kill: Speaking Up to End Hunger and Make Our

Election Work

By the end of 2019, all the Democratic candidates for president were talking about what they would do to reduce poverty — a shift from little explicit mention of poverty in recent election cycles. Bread for the World and Circle of Protection partners contacted each of the Republican and Democratic presidential primary campaigns and secured video statements about hunger and poverty from eight candidates. The Circle of Protection — composed of heads of Christian denominations, organizations, and institutions — urges our nation's leaders to give priority to alleviating hunger and poverty.

Bread promoted the video statements in emails and digital ads to more than 110 million voters and urged them to focus on hunger and poverty as an election issue. More than 750,000 people viewed the candidates' videos.

2019 Hunger Report

Bread for the World Institute's 2019 Hunger Report, Back to Basics: How to End Hunger by 2030, was launched in late August. The report makes the case that ending hunger is feasible and shares stories of advocacy. It discusses five key issues that are part of the solution: nutrition, jobs, gender, climate change, and fragility in nations and communities marked by hunger and violence.

Applying a Racial Equity Lens to End Hunger

Bread for the World Institute continues to share its research on the relationship between hunger, poverty, and race in the United States. In 2019, the Institute released a special report, Applying a Racial Equity Lens to U.S. Federal Nutrition Policies: SNAP, WIC, and Child Nutrition. The report outlines policy recommendations that will improve the impact of national nutrition programs, specifically in communities of color.

The Institute also utilized its Racial Wealth

David Beckmann was a leading advocate in convincing our nation and other countries to adopt the Sustainable Development Goals, including ending hunger by 2030.

2030. Beckmann travelled to Rome and met with Vatican officials twice in the run-up to the Pope's visit.

In 2016 and again in 2018, Bread played a leadership role in passing the Global Food Security Act, which has continued the U.S. food security initiative during the Trump administration. In 2017, Bread played a key role in gaining an appropriation of $1 billion in famine relief for Yemen, Northern Nigeria, South Sudan, and Somalia.

In 2018, Bread worked with many other groups to defeat a proposed $1 trillion cut in Medicaid. This result led to increases for safety-net programs in 2019, the first increases since 2010.

In 2019, Bread helped create and secure co-sponsors for the Global Nutrition Resolutions in the House and Senate. It achieved broad, bipartisan support for stronger U.S. investments to overcome child malnutrition around the world.

Activists in Action

Indiana

During the 2019 August congressional recess, Bread for the World members across the country visited lawmakers in their home districts.

On August 22, nearly 350 Bread for the World members and others representing 37 cities and towns in Indiana gathered to hear Sen. Todd Young (R-Ind.) state his support for increased global and domestic nutrition programs.

"Working on global hunger and food insecurity is both a national security issue and a moral imperative for the United States," Young said. "With the support of hundreds of concerned Hoosiers with Bread for the World, I've been able to use my position on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to elevate these humanitarian issues. I look forward to continuing to partner with [Bread for the World]."

Like Senator Young, many members of Congress spent more time in their home states and districts as part of the summer recess. Bread for the World members organized 121 meetings and other in-district actions over an eight-week period.

Idaho

In early November 2019, 160 anti-hunger advocates crowded into a room in Boise's Idaho History Museum to hear Sen. Jim Risch (R-Idaho) talk about foreign aid. The Idaho Cares about Foreign Affairs Luncheon was sponsored by Bread for the World, Oxfam, Save the Children Action Network, CARE USA, and the ONE Campaign.

Bread for the World board member Dawn Pierce asked Risch about the Global Nutrition Resolution. Pierce knew Risch had already cosponsored the resolution, but as the Republican chairman of the powerful Committee on Foreign Relations, he sets the committee agenda and his support to pass the bill out of committee was vital.

In response to Pierce's question, Risch said he would take the next step to advance the bill. "I'm going to put that bill on the next business meeting of the committee," he said. In pledging support for this measure, Sen. Risch noted the extreme poverty he saw on his recent travels to Africa, stating, "There's nothing — these kids have nothing."

The resolution passed in committee by unanimous voice vote on December 11, 2019. "Senator Risch kept his word and did what he promised he would do," said Pierce, expressing her gratitude for his leadership.

Clark Hansen, who leads Bread's fieldwork in Idaho, helped organize the event. He was thrilled to see a locally organized event move legislation in Washington, D.C., and he attributes the success to partnering with like-minded organizations at the community level.

Bread for the World is grateful to the several individuals, families, and institutions who made generous gifts in 2019 but wish their giving to remain anonymous.

Space does not permit us to recognize all our members whose generous financial support strengthens our collective Christian voice for an end to hunger. Our heartfelt gratitude goes out to them.

Contributions to Bread for the World are not tax-deductible because its members lobby Congress to end hunger. Many individuals and families chose to support Bread for the World Institute. Contributions to the Institute are tax-deductible and support research and education, including the publication of the annual Hunger Report and research on maternal and child nutrition.
